

PIGMENTED RIVER + PAW PRINTS (2012)

Pigmented River and Paw Prints is a public art arising from collaboration between La Tijera Elementary School and Otis College of Art and Design's Creative Action Program students.

Artist Robin Murez mentored Otis students to create art embedded into the school's walkway. Murez and her team cast a curved resin path in the concrete to reference the water and springs in the area. Feline paw prints, embedded in the pavement at streamside, playfully acknowledge the school's tiger mascot.

Robin Murez

Robin Murez's public art is seen across the United States. Her work in California collections includes pieces at the Oakland Zoo. She was Artist in Residence at Laumeier Sculpture Park in Missouri in 1998. She founded the community art project Venice Public Art in 2001. An artist and educator, Murez teaches at Otis College of Art and Design.

Murez earned her undergraduate degree in art history from Oberlin College. She received both Law and MFA degrees from Washington University in Saint Louis, Missouri. She founded the independent studio practice Venice Public Art in 2001, and resides in Venice, California.
